

As a Professor of Literacy Education in the CEHD, I am interested in serving on the Education Programs and Policies Committee, as it carries out an extremely important role in making recommendations related to curriculum and academic affairs. My scholarly research focuses on learning, teaching, and curriculum matters, so this committee aligns closely with my area of expertise. Since coming to Temple University, I have been an active member on a number of university-wide and/or faculty senate committees. The quality of our students' academic experience remains deeply tied to the charge of this committee, and this is an area I wish to contribute to through my involvement with the EPPC
